A MONDAY.

A loud A-lert!
The ripples on the stream,
The moonlight's fading beam,
They come—your page.
At last I see!
This life is vapor,
A flickering light!
In flowing ripples, in surging streams,
In hushed cadences, in glad exultations,
The rapid current runs its mystic race,
And ends at last where it began.

A light A-lert!
A light A-lert!
You minglest a wail,
That swells the wail,
Both good and ill,
Mysterious thing,
In surface shining,
In depths that glow.

With mingled passions that can never rest,
The heart is throbbing in the fount of rest,
Eager for joy, it seems to yearn,
And yearning passions that can never rest.

A light A-lert!
A light A-lert!
You minglest a wail,
That swells the wail,
Both good and ill,
Mysterious thing,
In surface shining,
In depths that glow.

Free by your workhouse, that you are sometimes, said he. "Only sometimes, grandpapa; but though I greater approve of workhouse life, I do not like to go out. I often find that it is greater charity to give work than money; so I really do not spend much of my time in sewing. Less you admire my workbasket, with its coloured worsted roses and lilies. It came from St. Margaret's Home, and was given to me by my cousin, and was made by a friend of one of the sisters. Do you mean Sisters of Charity?" said he. "No, I do not," said I. "Then, what kind of sisters are these except Roman Catholics and nuns and Sisters of Charity?" "Well, that is one of the novelties of our modern times; they are not Roman Catholics, and I do not know whether they would be more tolerated or not to be thought of as belonging to them. "What have you in that portfolio?" said grandpapa. "More photographs," said I. "Will you show me them?" he then said, to which I willingly agreed. As I went on showing one after another of Singapore, Malta, Cologne, Seville, Granada, &c., we came at last to 24 views taken in the north of China, and I said, "Any, almost without exception, views of what, you know, ourselves, though not taken in our presence, and if the Illustrated London News had replied to an offer we made seven years ago to send the photographs to them to copy, they might have saved themselves the expense of sending out a special artist to China, for we could easily have supplied the letters from the pictures." "But you have not explained to me what the Illustrated News is," said my grandpapa. "I remember a small publication, which bore that name, but surely they could not bear the expense of sending a special artist anywhere!" "They do indeed, and so, no doubt, does St. James's newspaper," said my grandpapa. "I remember the Standard, the Daily Telegraph, and others, send their special correspondents to all portions of the globe, and an American newspaper recently sent an expedition to the heart of Africa in search of Livingstone, the celebrated traveller whose death we are just mourning." "But the Illustrated News is a powerful engine for good or for evil," said my grandpapa.
